

FCS 2216 Interacting with Infants and Toddlers

Instructor: Jill Chesley-McGinnis

This course will explore caregiving as a vital component of education, child development, and a crucial building block of human community and society. Through class materials and observation, students will learn how young children's daily rituals and interactions with one another provide natural opportunities to celebrate care and build health, connection, independence, and community. This course will focus on children from birth to 3 years olds. This class is a hybrid class and meets in a combination of in-person, online, and classroom observation.
